

Imagine'14 - A Micro-SFP Competition (just for fun!)

We cordially invite you to write a very short story, proposing a new type of product related to intelligent environments technology. In addition to thinking of an idea for a new product, perhaps the biggest challenge is to motivate it in in a short story of 25 words, or less (a genre of SFP that called a Micro Science-Fiction Prototype or Micro-SFP for short). Generally there are three components to such a story; the technology, a simple action and a person. It is difficult to convey an idea in just 25 words, so don't treat this like an examination or a paper, it's supposed to be quick and fun! Intel has kindly donated 10 copies of their book "The Tomorrow Project Anthology" so the odds of winning a prize are favourable but submit your entry to the IE'14 front desk by no later than midday on the 3rd of July 2014! More information on writing Micro-SFPs is available for our website at: http://www.creative-science.org/activities/microsfp/

Jen Wu, Anasol Pena-Rios – 30 th June 2014
Please provide your name and contact details (WRITE CLEARLY, so we can contact you	ı)

Name:	Organisation:	EMAIL:

Twitter Size Fiction (140 characters – about 25 words, as average word size is around 5 + #tag) INSERT ONE CHARCATER PER BOX

 -
				#	I	Е	1	4

Twitter/Text Fiction (28 words – about 140 characters)
INSERT ONE WORD PER BOX

	#IE14

Background notes (optional) – this is for anything you want to tell us about the story					